REMARKS

The disidentified individual formerly known as Martin Scribb is wanted as a suspect in an on-going Carbon Laws–related investigation, specifically related to conspiracy to traffic, possess and sell illegal petroleum. This person of interest was sentenced to disidentification after a conviction on environmental crimes related to the methane-release event popularly known as “The Spike.” Scribb wears the distinctive tulip welt on his forehead to warn citizens of his status as a disidentified. His picture on this alert is partially obscured to comply with legal requirements of disidentification, specifically erasure of digital identities. Per the statute, partial identification is allowed if necessary for ongoing investigations of crimes falling under BES jurisdiction. Scribb is known to have joined a Franciscan monastery, then traveled to Canada, where he may have been kidnapped to crew the petroleum smuggling submarine Extinction.

CAUTION

Do not approach. If you have any information regarding Martin Scribb (dis), call the BES tip line, the BES Global Operations Center, or your nearest BES field office.
